

Speaker Bios: 2017 Montana WWAMI Faculty Development Conference

Anne Eacker, MD

Anne Eacker, MD, is the Associate Dean of Student Affairs for the University of Washington School of Medicine. In this role she oversees student progress issues as well as the counseling services, academic skills support services, and career advising for medical students across the region. Her research interest is in medical student well-being and prevention of medical student distress, and she is the co-author of numerous articles on these topics. In her current role, she also co-chairs both the Learning Environment Committee and the Anti-Racism Action Committee for the UWSOM. She is a 1997 graduate of the UWSOM and was a first year student at the WSU/UID campus in 1993. Her clinical practice is in outpatient general internal medicine.

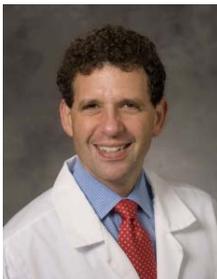

James Guyer, MD

James Guyer, MD, is the Program Director at the Montana Family Medicine Residency in Billings and is an Assistant Clinical Professor, for University of Washington School of Medicine Dept. of Family Medicine. He joined the Montana Family Medicine Residency faculty in 2004. His medical interests include teaching, rural medicine, aerospace medicine, veterans medicine, and complementary medicine. The most satisfying part of teaching: Working with residents and faculty who teach me something every day, who are without pretense, and are seriously concerned about those people who have less. He is married and has two grown children.

Nerissa Koehn, MD

Nerissa Koehn, MD, a native Missoulian, is the Associate Program Director at the Family Medicine Residency of Western Montana (FMRWM) in Missoula. She received her M.D. from Harvard Medical School and completed a Family Medicine residency at the Tacoma Family Medicine Residency in Tacoma, Washington. She and her husband practiced for 8 years with the Indian Health Service on the Zuni Pueblo in New Mexico, prior to moving back to Montana to help start up FMRWM. She is a Clinical Instructor with the UWSOM Dept. of Family Medicine.

Bruce Peyser, MD

Dr. Bruce Peyser, MD, is a Professor of Medicine at Duke University of Medicine, Dept. of Medicine. He received his undergraduate degree from Dartmouth College and his medical degree from Cornell University. He completed his internship in Internal Medicine at the Washington Hospital Center in Washington, D.C. and then transferred to the University of Rochester to complete his internal medicine residency. Since joining the Department of Medicine at Duke in 2005, he has served as a small group leader in addition to leading several large group lectures. He also has been a teacher for second year medical students in the Clinical Skills Course since it started in 2011. Additionally, he has served as a founding faculty member and mentor in the Primary Care Leadership Track where he leads a weekly seminar series and he has been a teacher in the Practice Course for the last 9 years.

Currently he is the Practice Medicine Director for the Pickett Road Internal Medicine Clinic, one of only three sites where Duke internal medicine residents receive their general medicine ambulatory education. In his role as Medical Director, Dr. Peyser oversees the operations and supervises 7 internists, one physician assistant and 20 house staff. This practice also serves as one of the main sites for teaching Duke medical students outpatient care, with about 15 students per year rotating through the practice. Dr. Peyser has had active leadership in the International Consortium of Longitudinal Integrated Clerkships (CLIC). He has presented his findings at the last 5 annual meetings and served as host of the 2015 conference.

Somnath
Mookherjee, MD

Dr. Mookherjee, MD, is an assistant professor of medicine at the University of Washington; his clinical practice is in perioperative medicine and internal medicine consultation. His scholarly work focuses on optimizing clinical teaching. In recent years, he has published research on peer feedback of teaching, physical examination education, and education in quality improvement and patient safety. He is co-editor of the "Handbook of Clinical Teaching," and is a co-author of a manual on "Writing Case Reports - A Practical Guide from Conception through Publication." Dr. Mookherjee directs the Faculty Development Program for the UW Division of General Internal Medicine and is a Deputy Editor for the Journal of Hospital Medicine.

Dr. Mookherjee completed his training in internal medicine at the University of Washington in 2007. He went to the University of California, San Francisco (UCSF) where he completed an academic hospital medicine fellowship and the Teaching Scholars Program. He returned to the University of Washington in 2012 to rejoin the Division of General Internal Medicine.

Sherilyn Smith, MD

Sherilyn Smith, MD, is a Professor of Pediatric Infectious Diseases and co-director of the medical student pediatric education programs at Seattle Children's Hospital and the University of Washington School of Medicine. She has received numerous teaching awards including outstanding Clinical Teacher from the UWSOM and has been listed by the International Association of Pediatricians as a top pediatrician in Seattle. Dr. Smith's interests are in medical education, teaching and curriculum development. She feels fortunate to be able to teach and learn from her students and patients every day she works at Seattle Children's.

Teaching Multiple Learners at Different Levels: *Faculty, Resident, and Student Panel (Sunday session):

Serena Brewer, DO (FM), TRUST/WRITE Coordinator, Southwest Montana CHC, Butte

Dawn Corso, MD, Montana Family Medicine Residency, Billings

Dallas Clark, MD, Family Medicine Residency of Western Montana, Missoula

Ethan Richards, MD, Family Medicine Residency of Western Montana, Missoula

Orin Hansen, MS4 (matched FM)

Kena Lackman, MS4 (matched FM)